

Canyon Glen Park opens again

Canyon Glen Park in Provo Canyon will be reopened for public use immediately, Clyde Naylor, Utah County engineer, reports.

Naylor said the park as closed earlier this year, at the request of the Utah Department of Transportation because of construction work in the canyon.

"The closure caused more problems that there would have been if the park had been opened," Naylor said. People using the park for recreation parked their vehicles along the highway the full length of the park causing serious traffic congestion, he said.

"If and when the state gets to the point of construction along that section of the highway, we will probably have to close the park, but that will probably be next year," Naylor said.

Until that time, Canyon Glen will be open for the use of people who want to fish, picnic or enjoy the out of doors.
